January 2019

Spitzee Elementary

December here at Spitzee School was filled with joy and excitement as the holiday season brought out the best in the students, families and staff in our school community. As we move toward 2019 there have been many reasons to celebrate over the last month.

First off we would like to thank all of our staff and students involved with our Christmas concerts. From junior Kindergarten to grade 5 we are so proud of the effort and energy that our students and staff dedicated to their performances. We would also like to extend our gratitude to our three incredible music teachers Mrs. Misura, Miss Daisey, and Mrs. Scheller, their creativity and commitment is the foundation that our awesome shows are built upon. We would also like to thank Ms. Saliken for training and organizing the Jazz dance group for the night of the grade 2/3 concert. Finally, thank you to all of the families and friends that joined us for the performances, we are truly grateful to be part of such a strong community.

We have been very fortunate this winter in terms of the weather, with that being said we can expect colder weather as we head into January. We would like to take the opportunity to once again remind everyone that unless the outside temperature feels colder than -20 Celsius our students will be outside for recess and before school. Because of this it is essential that students be properly clothed for such weather. In the event that it is too cold for students to go outside we will also be keeping our safety patrols inside, this means that our crosswalks will be unmanned. Often students are in a hurry to get out of the cold and may not be as careful in crossing the street as usual. In order to ensure the safety of our students as they make their way to school please be diligent as you drive through these areas.

January can be a challenging month for many of our students as they try to readapt to the routines of school after a two week break. As parents we can support our kids by developing consistent habits for regular attendance at school. It is much easier for students to familiarize themselves with the routines of school when they attend consistently and on time. Students who are chronically late or absent miss the opportunity to learn the routines that help them streamline their work and thus miss valuable learning time. We very much appreciate your support in having our students attend school regularly.

Kicking off in January is the grade 5 basketball season. Students are already working hard during lunch recess to brush up on their skills and come together as a team. We can't wait for the first game here at Spitzee on January 15th. Finally, Christmas break is here! In all the busyness of the holiday season please take the time to connect with family and friends, relax and reflect on all that 2018 brought and hope for all that 2019 has in store. Have a wonderful break, we cannot wait to see you in the New Year.

Happy Holidays,

Brooke MacNeill & Chase Ellis

Math is Everywhere!!

Our language around math matters!

How many times have you heard people say "I'm not good at math"?

Perhaps you've said it yourself. Often people make the statement with pride, almost implying it's "cool" to be bad at math. Imagine if the same number of people claimed "I'm not good at reading"! (The Conversation January 17, 2016)

Parents are important partners in education.

Fostering a joy of learning and a belief in your child's ability to learn is key to setting a foundation for learning success. This is especially true in the area of math where we often hear people indicating that they have fears of math or that they are not math people. Ensuring positive language around your own math abilities is essential and the first important step.

An article in USA Today speaks to "tossing out those negative misconceptions we've cultivated that we're not good at math" and the author describes three misconceptions that create barriers to math learning: USA Today July 9, 2014

Misconception #1: Math ability is a gift — you either have it or you don't. The reality is everyone has the potential to be good at math. The brain can grow and adapt - we can actually grow our "math brains" through hard work and effort.

Misconception #2: Being good at math is about being fast. In fact, emphasis on speed can lead to increased anxiety and "brain freeze." University of Chicago psychologists have found that this anxiety can impede problem solving. "Brain freeze" is real, and math anxiety can induce it. When we emphasize speed only we send the incorrect message that all problems should be solved quickly, which hurts kids' persistence on more complicated tasks.

Misconception #3: Math is all about "rules" and procedures. Of course, math facts and computations are important. Actually, math is much more than that. Math is about making sense of problems and understanding why particular strategies work. Math is not about the "one right way" to solve a problem. Rather, it's about the multiple ways to see and solve problems.

In considering these misconceptions, and how to create a positive mindset about math, look for opportunities to bring math into daily conversations and simple activities. Math is all around us!

Kilometers per hour and how long it will take to get somewhere

Counting and sorting – count and sort as many things as you can

While shopping – which costs less per unit?, how much do we need to buy?

Baking and cooking – fractions, reasoning, measuring

Birthday parties – if we add two more children, how many will we have in total?

I see two deer on the right and four deer on the left side of the road, how many deer in total?

Play board games that use money or dice or cards

Do puzzles

Plan a garden or paint a room

Developing a positive math attitude is essential in supporting math learning success at school. Just like developing a daily reading habit, developing a mind set of looking for opportunities to use math language and encourage regular application of numeracy skills is essential.

... and the most important first step is speaking positively about your own math abilities – we are all math people!
